Admission requirements

Students must successfully pass a proficiency test in order to be accepted to commence studies in French Language. The dates for and information regarding the tests are posted on the bulletin board. Usually the test is held twice a year; the first test in the spring and second held at the beginning of September. Students taking the test should have good knowledge of French acquired in Finnish upper secondary school or in the intermediate courses taught in the Language and Communication Unit.

Students can participate in courses in the French Language programme immediately upon passing the proficiency test. Students applying for the right to study in the programme as a non-degree student must also pass the proficiency test. Teaching is organised annually on the basis of resources and demand. Courses typically begin in the autumn term. Students should take particular note that skills courses have prerequisites and thus should be taken in the correct order.

Study guidance

Study guidance is provided by the programme's lecturers (for questions concerning courses), mainly during their individual office hours.

French Language

The aim of the French Language study programme is to provide the students with a firm command of French and familiarise them with research in the field as well as with the contemporary situation, literature and culture of France as well as other French-speaking countries. The goal is providing the students with the tools, knowledge and skills necessary for scholarly work as well as encouraging them to work independently, critically and analytically.

French Language as a subsidiary subject (minor) is composed of 60 ECTS credits: 25 ECTS of Basic Studies and 35 ECTS of Intermediate Studies. The smallest package for taking French as a subsidiary subject is the Basic Studies (25 ECTS) plus the French Supplementary Course. Advanced Studies in French Language can be completed, for example, at Turku or Tampere University.

French is the mother tongue for 100-115 million people; approximately 220 million people worldwide speak French. It is the second most important mother tongue in the EU and an official language in 32 countries.

The French Language study package provides the students with excellent skills needed for advancing their understanding of the multi-centric world politically, economically and culturally.

In addition to language skills, studies of French Language emphasise the study and understanding of cultural backgrounds. Literature, culture and history form an essential part of the identities of France and French-speaking countries. The international character of French enables students to familiarise themselves with the multicultural world outside Europe as well. Thanks to numerous EU programmes, students also have the possibility to complete part of their studies in France, at the universities of Artois or Rennes.

Employment prospects

Basic and Intermediate studies in the French Language programme provide the students with the official qualification to teach French in Finnish secondary and upper secondary schools. French, together with English, is a main language of working and negotiations in the European Union, which is why people with a good command of French are needed in, for example, administrative organizations of countries and municipalities, in institutes of higher education, research centres and in international organizations. As a result of the integration of economic markets, French has also further strengthened its standing in business life.

Practical information

Course grading

Exams are usually graded numerically 0–5:

0 = fail (refusé/e)

1 = sufficient (passable)

2 = satisfactory (satisfaisant)

3 = good (bien)

4 = very good (très bien)

5 = excellent (excellent)

A small number of separately indicated courses are graded pass/fail

An overall grade 1–5 is awarded after completion of each study package (see above)

Study packages and learning outcomes

Upon completion of the Basic Studies package, students have a good command of French (level B1–B2 in the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages). In addition, students have acquired a fundamental understanding of the history of France as well as of various fields of society and culture.

Upon completion of the Intermediate Studies package, students are able to communicate fluently in French in both writing and speech (level B2–C1 in the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages). Students will have furthered their understanding of various fields of society and culture in France and the French-speaking world in general, and students will have a more expansive view of the various fields of research in the discipline.
