History

Contact information

Address: Faculty of Humanities/History, PL 1000, 90014 University of Oulu, Finland
Telephone: +358 29 448 3313 (office/study guidance), paivi.kynkaanniemi@oulu.fi

Website: <http://www.oulu.fi/hutk/historia/index.html>

Admission requirements

History may be studied as a major subject by anyone who has passed the annual entrance exam held during the summer.

History may be studied as a subsidiary (minor) subject by passing the entrance exam for Basic and Intermediate Level Studies held during spring. (More information on exam dates and required readings can be acquired from the departmental office and from the history department's website.) A maximum of 20 subsidiary subject students are admitted annually based on the entrance exam results.

University of Oulu students may also apply for the right to study History as a major subject if they have completed the Basic and Intermediate Studies (with an average grade of 3 or higher) and the Dean of the Faculty has approved their application to complete a Master's Degree in History.

A curriculum of History courses on offer is published at the beginning of each semester. Information about arrangement of information sessions is posted on the department's bulletin board and online on the department's website.

Study guidance

Study guidance is offered by Lecturer Matti Enbuske, phone +358 29 448 3302, matti.enbuske@oulu.fi; and Lecturer Ritva Kylli, phone +358 29 448 3307, ritva.kylli@oulu.fi

Employment prospects

Information about employment prospects can be found in the Manuale Historiae study guide (in Finnish) available at: www.oulu.fi/hutk/historia/opiskelu/manuale.html, and from the Career Services website: www.oulu.fi/careerservices/

Practical information

Practical information can be found from the history department's study guide Manuale Historiae (in Finnish), a handbook designed for history students. All history students receive a copy of the study guide, and it can also be found in PDF format on the department's website, as linked above.

Study packages and learning outcomes

The Basic Level courses in History are taught in tandem with those of the History of Science and Ideas programme. The joint Basic Level study package gives students an overview of history and its key turning points from the point of view of the two different disciplines. Students are also introduced to history theory and academic writing. The methodology studies in particular create a foundation for developing critical evaluation skills and for the mastering of research methods typical of the field.

Upon completion of Basic Level study package, students will have acquired the knowledge, skills and conceptual understanding that are required for the critical evaluation of the past and related research. Students will have understood the nature of processes of theory and history, and can recognize the characteristics of and different approaches to academic historical research. Students will also have a general grasp of the process of history and its key turning points. Additionally, students will have acquired the necessary skills for creating short presentations and other written and oral tasks based on their own expertise.

The Intermediate Level study package provides the student with a foundation for independent research. Students become familiar with different research methods through guided practical work. Through the use of multimodal teaching methods, students also become thoroughly familiarized with the focal areas of history, and become familiar with specialized themes that may interest them as research subjects.

Upon completion of the Intermediate Level study package, students will have acquired a thorough, deep comprehension of the different approaches, methods and data sources of historical research, as well as an understanding of the scope of the discipline, the complexity of hypotheses, key research traditions and methodological trends. Students will have acquired the skills required during the Master Level studies related to proposing academic hypotheses, utilizing pre-existing knowledge and source materials, documenting facts, as well as employing argumentation, critique and dialogue as well as drawing academic conclusions. Students will have attained the basic skills for designing and completing short theses via independent research and projects by applying academic knowledge based on their own expertise.

The Advanced Level study package creates a basis for researching and creating historical literature based on students' own interests through theoretical and specialized studies. The Advanced Level studies also simultaneously create a foundation for various future employment prospects.

Upon completion of the Advanced Level study package, students will be able to design and complete advanced research and application projects, as well as create new academic information. Students will be capable of producing demanding independent work that requires analytical, creative and ethical evaluation, as well as be able to work as an expert in various professional groups and communities. Students will be able to critically evaluate different materials and theses, as well as present research results in a coherent, professional literary form. Students will be able to apply the key research methods of historical study in a variety of ways. Students will be able to utilize the concepts of historical research, and they will also have the skills to apply methodological and theoretical tools from other disciplines. Students will comprehend the complexity of the field of historical research, and will be able to contextualize their own research within the broader discourse in the field. Students will be able to independently follow the academic discourse of the field. Through their specialization, students will also have acquired advanced skills to interpret, analyse and communicate historical knowledge or that of any other field of study.
