Admission requirements

Film Studies can be studied as a subsidiary (minor) subject by any student registered and enrolled at the University of Oulu. The commencement of studies in the programme does not require special enrolment –studies commence simply by participating in the lectures or by signing up for exams. Students are free to attend lectures, but only a limited number of students may participate in practical courses and seminars; therefore, students must sign up for these in advance via WebOodi.

Study guidance

Study guidance is offered by the Lecturer of Film Studies, tel. +358 29 448 3337. The Lecturer is available during office hours and at other times by appointment. Information regarding lectures, practical courses, and seminars, as well as other current events of the term can be found on the programme's website and bulletin board.

Academic Affairs Secretary, tel. +358 29 448 3313, provides guidance for questions concerning accreditation, signing up for exams as well as other practical matters concerning studying at the University.

Film Studies

The primary object of study in Film Studies is cinema. However, film is part of a wider audio-visual media culture and closely related to "traditional" audio-visual media, such as television and radio as well as a wide range of so-called new media. Courses in Film Studies familiarise students with film and audio-visual media culture as historical, cultural and aesthetic phenomena. Students are provided with the fundamental skills needed for theoretical analysis and examination of aesthetic features and institutional relations of films and their development. In addition, Film Studies aims to provide students with an understanding of media culture and its development and technological manifestations in a wider historical context. Audio-visual media culture is such a fundamental part of contemporary society that acquiring an understanding of it is essential for all cultural studies. The subject also provides students aiming to become teachers with the qualifications to teach media in schools. Students planning to become teachers can complete a 15 ECTS-credit Media Education package which is comprised of the following three Basic Studies courses: Introduction to the Study of Media Culture, Basics of Media Education, and Practical Media Education.

Employment prospects

Students who aim for careers in the fields of culture, art, and communication will find a background in film studies useful. In addition, the subject provides students aiming to become teachers with qualifications to teach media education.

Practical information:

Exams

Exams for both Basic and Intermediate Level courses can be taken on the examination dates of the Faculty of Humanities as well as on the examination dates of the degree group (Group II – Cultural Studies). The examination dates can be found on the website: <http://www oulu.fi/hutk/node/14057> (In Finnish). These examination dates are primarily meant for so-called book exams, and students must sign up 10 days in advance via WebOodi. The sign up is only required for book exams. Formal lectures have their own, separate examination times and do not require sign-up. Signing up for lecture examinations is only necessary in the case of a retake of a lecture examination, which may be taken on the faculty's examination dates or the degree group-specific examination dates. In this case (i.e. signing up for retake exams), students must specify the name of the course and the date when the course was originally taken. Formal lecture examinations should only be taken on the examination dates upon separate agreement with the lecturer, especially if a long time has passed since students' participation in the lectures. All Film Studies exams are marked by the Lecturer of Film Studies, unless otherwise noted.

Course essays

For some courses, it is possible and recommended that students submit essays or book essays. Information and instructions on such options can be found on the Film Studies' website.

Explanation of course instructions

Lectures and literature: Students are required to participate in the lectures, as well as take an exam based on the literature.

Literature and/or lectures: Lectures on the course might not be held every year. Therefore, students are not required to participate in the lectures and can complete the course by a book exam.

Identification and studies

Students must always mark their student number on exam papers, home essays or other projects. If students' work is such that it might be used for more than one course, students must denote the specific course that they wish to complete with the exam, essay or other project.

Study packages and learning outcomes

Upon completion of the Basic Studies package, students will have acquired theoretical expertise and conceptual skills needed for critical analysis of film and the study of film. Students will be able to understand cinema in its historical context and as part of a wider media culture. Students will be able to compare and see the relations between the main characteristics of different trends in film theory as well as distinguish between various narrative and stylistic features of films. In addition, based on their individual interests, students will have an understanding of the fundamental questions regarding one of the following focus areas: media education, genre theory, or film and the study of history. After completing the elective practical courses, students will have acquired the skills needed either for planning and executing a short film or for weighing and applying various practical methods of media education aimed at various target groups.

Upon completion of the Intermediate Studies package, students will have a versatile understanding of the critical perspectives, theories and methods of Film Studies. Students will be able to perceive the scope and diversity of film and audio-visual media culture as a field of study. In terms of knowledge, the aim is to further students' understanding of classical and new film theories, study methods and the history of film, as well as to further their ability to analyse audio-visual narratives. Students will have the practical skills needed for the critical examination of various perspectives and schools in Film Studies, and students will be able to understand the relationships between various aesthetic, technological, economic, and social phenomena of film and audio-visual media culture. Students will also be able to apply the acquired knowledge and utilise it in the context of essays, theses, presentations or similar independent projects.

Stam and Miller (eds.): Film and Theory (selected sections).

Film and Theory is divided into sections and, for the exam, students must choose whole sections. Eight (8) articles equal 2.5 ECTS credits, and 16 articles equal 5 ECTS credits. For the whole course, therefore, students can freely choose 4–5 sections (= at least 16 articles). For example, students should mark the chosen sections as follows (for 5 ECTS credits):

“Stam & Miller: Film and Theory, sections IV, IX, XI, XII”. When completing an exam on Stam and Miller, students must mark the chosen sections on the exam envelope. (Mentioning “sections of Stam & Miller” is not enough. If sections are not individually specified, it will not be possible to design appropriate questions for the exam.)
