The subject of Sámi Language has two study lines, North Sámi and Inari Sámi.

Admission requirements and commencement of studies

Anyone wishing to study Sámi Language as a major subject must apply to the university during the joint application period in the spring and take an entrance examination. Students enrolled at the University of Oulu may also take Sámi Language as a major subject by completing the basic and intermediate studies in the subject with a minimum grade of 3 and by applying for the right to change their major subject from the faculty.

Practical information

At the beginning of each autumn semester, a meeting is organized for new students to acquire information and get acquainted with the staff of the institute. During the first semester, students prepare their own personal study plans. In order to do so, students reserve time for individual meetings with the lecturer, where they have an opportunity to discuss their studies in more detail.

The lecturer guides all students with matters related to taking a degree, selecting minor subjects and advancing one's studies. The lecturer also gives students guidance on matters related to international student exchange and work practice. The lecturer can be contacted in office number HU327 and telephone number +358 29 448 3486.

Overview of the subject

Sámi Language as a major subject

Research on Sámi language is a discipline within the humanities that carries out teaching and research on the structures and use of language, spoken and written language, the norms of language (language planning) as well as on the variation and development of language. The language of instruction is either North Sámi or Inari Sámi, depending on the line of study. The North Sámi line of study is primarily intended for native speakers and non-native speakers who have a native-like command of North Sámi. Information on language requirements in the Inari Sámi study line can be found below in section Inari Sámi.

The subject of Sámi Language aims to train multi-skilled language professionals to serve the Sámi society. Graduates of Sámi Language work, for example, in the fields of teaching and research, Sámi-language media, translation and language planning, administration and language technology. Studying Sámi Language, carrying out their own research and participating in work practice increase students' chances in finding employment in their desired profession after graduation.

Completing both the Candidate's and Master's degrees takes approximately five years of study. Completing the Candidate's degree usually takes three years and the Master's degree two years.

It is possible to study Sámi Language all the way to a Doctoral degree. In effect, many students who have acquired a Master's degree resume their studies immediately after graduation or after working elsewhere for a few years.

In addition to offering Sámi Language as a major subject, the Giellagas Institute provides teaching in Sámi Culture, Sámi Language as a Foreign Language and Inari Sámi as minor subjects.

Sámi Language as a minor subject

Basic Studies in Sámi Language 25 sp

Students taking North Sámi as a major subject must be native speakers of Sámi or otherwise have a good command of Sámi. Students wishing to take North Sámi as a minor subject must take the entrance examination for the minor-subject entry. The examination is congruent with the entrance examination for the major-subject entry, which is organized every year.

Selecting minor subjects

Students who participate in the Secondary Teacher Education Programme take as their compulsory minor subjects adapted Basic Studies in Literature (26 sp), Basic Studies in Sámi Culture (25 sp), studies in Speech Communication (5 sp) and Pedagogical Studies for Subject Teachers (60 sp).

Students of Sámi Language who do not aim to become teachers may select their minor subjects according to their own interests. That is why degrees in Sámi Language may differ considerably, depending on the minor subjects that students have selected. Minor subjects that can be recommended to students of Sámi Language include Sámi Culture, Finnish Language, Finnish as a Second or Foreign Language, other Sámi languages and other languages related to Finnish, foreign languages, Literature, Language Technology, Communications, Information Studies and Social Studies. General Linguistics and Phonetics are especially suitable for students interested in a career in research.

Secondary Teacher Education Programme for students of Sámi Language

Students who participate in the Secondary Teacher Education Programme study, in addition to Sámi Language, as their minor subjects adapted Basic Studies in Literature (26 sp), Basic Studies in Sámi Culture (25 sp), studies in Speech Communication (5 sp) and adapted Pedagogical Studies for Subject Teachers (60 sp). The adapted Basic Studies in Literature include the course 683461P Sámi literature, which is taken as an alternative to the course 687100P Introduction to research. The Giellagas Institute is responsible for the course. Some of the Pedagogical Studies for Subject Teachers are included in the Candidate's degree and others in the Master's degree. Students take the Basic Studies package (25 sp), which are included in the Candidate's degree, during their third year of studying. Students then take the Intermediate Studies package (35 sp), which are included in the Master's degree, during their fourth year of studying. The theoretical part of the pedagogical studies are completed in Oulu and most of the practical training is carried out in Northern Finland. The person responsible for the Secondary Teacher Education Programme in Sámi Language is the lecturer (HU 327, tel. +358 29 448 3486), who may be contacted for further information.

Organization of studies

Students complete the Basic Studies package during the first year, the Intermediate Studies package during the second and third, and the Advanced Studies package during the fourth and fifth year of studying.

Students must have completed the Basic Studies package with a minimum grade of 3 in order to commence the Intermediate Studies package. Students are given a grade for the Basic Studies and Intermediate Studies packages based on the average of their course grades. Students must have completed the Basic Studies and Intermediate Studies packages with a minimum grade of 3 in order to commence the Advanced Studies package. Students are given a grade for the Advanced Studies package based on the average of their course grades.

Curriculum

The curriculum (so-called autumn or spring bulletin) is placed on the noticeboard of the institute at the beginning of each semester. The curriculum is also available at the website of the institute. The noticeboard is also used to inform students of new courses, changes in lecture times and rooms, visiting lecturers, grants, job openings and so on. The periods referred to in the course descriptions are positioned in the academic year so that periods 1 and 2 take place in the autumn semester and periods 3 and 4 in the spring semester.

Examinations and sign-up

Teaching in Basic Studies and Intermediate Studies is mainly organized as courses that involve lectures and exercises, and most courses include an examination. Different working methods are employed in different courses and, in addition to examinations, essays, learning journals and book examinations are used. The Intermediate Studies and Advanced Studies packages include many elective courses that are mainly based on book examinations or essays.

It is not necessary to sign up for lecture examinations (unless otherwise agreed). For a course that is to be taken as a book examination on a faculty examination date or on an examination date for a subject group, students must sign up in Web Oodi (<https://weboodi.oulu.fi/oodi/>) at least ten days before the date of examination. The examination dates for faculty and subject-group examinations can be found on the website of the Faculty of Humanities, under Studies, Examination days. The examination results will be available in the electronic study register Oodi and at the noticeboard of the institute, in a folder for examination results. In the folder, students are listed by their student number, rather than their name, together with a grade for the course or the examination.

Enrolment and office services

Students must enrol at the university every year at the Student Services. Any changes in name or address must be reported to the Student Services and to the Giellagas Institute.

Basic Studies 25 s p

Students have a command of the key issues of grammar, spelling and norms of North Sámi and are able to produce various kinds of texts. Students are able to describe the main features of word phonology, morphophonology and syntactic morphology of North Sámi. Students actively extend their vocabularies and are able to pay informed attention to enriching their language. Students are also familiar with Sámi literature.

Intermediate Studies 45 sp

Students have a command of Sámi grammar and spelling and are able to maintain their skills independently. They extend their written and spoken use of Sámi and are able to produce academic texts. They are also familiar with the main lines of development of the Sámi language. Students improve their skills in lexicological work.

Advanced studies 80 sp

Students have strong skills in spoken and written Sámi. They write, translate and revise demanding texts. They have a good command of various text types, ways and styles of language use and employ Sámi also in academic communication. Students have a command of not only the practical use of Sámi grammar but also of analyzing it from different theoretical viewpoints. They have a comprehensive understanding of Sámi as an object of linguistic research. They have acquired extensive knowledge of research areas that are of interest to themselves and are able to plan and carry out research independently.

Course titles according to modules

Studies in Sámi Language consist of five modules: 1) text, 2) variation, 3) grammar, 4) research and 5) integrative studies.

The Giellagas Institute offers students of Sámi Language who participate in the Secondary Teacher Education Programme a course in Sámi literature that forms a part of the Basic Studies package in Literature:

Inari Sámi

Admission requirements and commencement of studies

Anyone wishing to study Inari Sámi as a major subject must take an entrance examination. Information on the entrance examination is provided by the lecturer in Inari Sámi.

Study guidance

At the beginning of each autumn semester, a meeting is organized for new students to acquire information and get acquainted with the staff of the institute. At the end of their first semester, students design their first personal study plan. In order to do so, students reserve time for individual meetings with the lecturer and the amanuensis, where they have an opportunity to discuss their studies in more detail.

During their studies, students design a total of three personal study plans: after the initial plan, two more are required, one of which is included in the Candidate's degree and the other in the Master's degree. It is compulsory for students to prepare personal study plans: no study points are awarded for them, but they are marked down in the study register.

The lecturer guides students with matters related to, among other things, taking a degree, selecting minor subjects and advancing one's studies. Students may reach the lecturer at +358 29 448 3486.

Overview of the subject

Inari Sámi has only recently become a subject of teaching and research at the University of Oulu. Inari Sámi was first introduced as a minor subject in 2000, and it became an independent line of study leading to a Master's degree within the major subject of Sámi Language in 2011 – as this Study Guide was published. The teaching and research in Inari Sámi focus on the structures and use of the language, spoken and written language, theoretical and practical language planning and the variation and development of the language. The language of instruction is Inari Sámi, but the studies also include courses in other Sámi languages, such as North Sámi and Skolt Sámi. Some courses may be integrated with studies in North Sámi and Sámi Culture, and the language of instruction may sometimes be Finnish. Because North Sámi in particular is fairly well-spread and because North Sámi and Inari Sámi are in effect closely connected, it is desirable that students should take at least the basic and advanced courses in North Sámi. However, this is not made compulsory in the curriculum.

The line of study in Inari Sámi is designed so that Inari Sámi is a suitable major subject both to non-native beginners and to those who have a better command of the language – native or native-like speakers. The outline of the curriculum is largely based on experiences gained when Inari Sámi was offered as a subject in continuing education (2009–2010) to train various professionals who had no previous knowledge of Inari Sámi into active users of the language in their own fields of expertise. Two generations have already lost their language, so the language needs support from outside the language community. In order for non-native speakers to be able to gain an excellent or even native-like command of the language, the starting level of the Basic Studies package has been raised. Thus, the Introductory course in Inari Sámi is not part of the Basic Studies package. However, it is possible to take the course at the University of Oulu. The course may also be covered by having studied the language as a so-called B3 subject in upper secondary school.

The subject of Sámi Language aims to train multi-skilled language professionals to serve the Sámi society. That is why the Inari Sámi line of study includes studies in certain specific domains. For example, translation skills are needed when working in professions that produce study materials or translate literature. Within the Inari Sámi language community, an understanding of language revitalization is among the most important means of supporting the language, as highlighted in the studies. Furthermore, experts are required in teaching and research as well as in Sámi-language media, language planning and administration.

Studying more than one Sámi language, carrying out research and participating in work practice increase students' chances in finding employment in their desired profession after graduation. Students acquaint themselves with working life already during their studies, and a period of work practice is included in the Candidate's degree.

Students select their minor subjects according to their interests and to the kinds of professions they wish to pursue after their studies. It is possible to study Sámi languages all the way to a Doctoral degree. In effect, more and more students who have acquired the Master's degree resume their studies immediately after graduation or after working elsewhere for a few years.

The Giellagas Institute offers two lines of study in Sámi languages: Inari Sámi and North Sámi. Other subjects offered by the Giellagas Institute include North Sámi as a Foreign Language and Sámi Culture. These are also suitable minor subjects to students of Inari Sámi.

Inari Sámi study line

Learning objectives at different levels

Having completed the Basic Studies package, students have a good command of the basic grammar of Inari Sámi and are able to use the language in everyday contexts in both speaking and writing. Students also have a good command of the key concepts in research on Inari Sámi and are familiar with the status of the language and the characteristics of Inari Sámi culture.

Having completed the Intermediate Studies package in Inari Sámi, students have an in-depth understanding of the structures of Inari Sámi. They are also familiar with the establishment of literary Inari Sámi and its development to its present form. Furthermore, students deepen their knowledge of different fields of research on the language. Students have a good command of the basics of academic writing and are able to prepare brief academic studies, compositions and other oral or written presentations, drawing on primary and secondary materials.

Having completed the Advanced Studies package in Inari Sámi, students have an in-depth understanding of the structures of the language. They are able to work independently and draw on primary and secondary sources in their own research. They are also able to work independently as experts in various fields that concern language.

Courses at different levels

Students who have no prior knowledge of Inari Sámi are encouraged to take the Introductory course in Inari Sámi before commencing the Basic Studies package. Students who have completed a degree in Inari Sámi in upper secondary school or who have otherwise gained adequate language skills in Inari Sámi do not have to take the Introductory course. If necessary, students may take a separate test to prove their language skills.

Learning outcomes:

Having completed the course, students are familiar with the methods of data collection in linguistics and are able independently to plan data collection in literature, in archives or through fieldwork. They are able to take into account the challenges and possible difficulties related to data collection, carry out and complete the data collection process and organize the collected materials for archiving.

Contents:

The introductory lectures deal with general issues related to data collection and management in linguistics. Students prepare their plans for data collection that will be discussed in the seminar meetings. After that, students carry on with data collection independently. They hand in their final reports for discussion in the seminar meetings.

Mode of delivery:

Language of instruction:

Inari Sámi

Timing:

2nd –3rd year

Learning outcomes:

The course deals with the history of literary Inari Sámi, following the development of Inari Sámi orthography from the first written texts to the modern age. The focus is especially on the development of literary Inari Sámi in the 1850s, on the letters written by Inari Sámi informants to linguist A. V. Koskimies in the 1880s as well as on the transition into the beginning of the 20th century when the first religious books in Inari Sámi were published. The course deals with the orthographic changes that took place in the 20th century and introduces Inari Sámi writers, their texts and the orthographies that they used.

Having completed the course, students are able to report both on the history of literary Inari Sámi and on the establishment and development of its orthography. The main focus is on the language of the 19th and 20th centuries. Students are also able to evaluate the role of the most significant scientists and religious figures on the establishment of literary Inari Sámi.

Contents:

Familiarization with the most significant Inari Sámi writers of the 19th and 20th centuries and the orthographies that they used. The role of key scientists and religious figures on the establishment of written Inari Sámi and the orthographies that they used.

Learning outcomes:

The course acquaints students with the challenges of Inari Sámi phonology and morphology. In phonology, focus is especially on practicing sound lengths. In morphology, particular attention is paid to variation within a word as well as to inflectional forms that are usually perceived as challenging. The main emphasis of the course is on oral language skills.

Having completed the course, students have an in-depth understanding of Inari Sámi pronunciation and of the most difficult inflectional forms. They are able to pronounce Inari Sámi words that are challenging for them and use even such inflectional forms that they find difficult.

Contents:

1) Pronunciation: Long, short and lengthened vowels; long and short diphthongs; short, half-long and long consonants; voiced and voiceless consonants 2) Inflection: variation within a word (vowel changes, vowel and consonant length), quantitative and qualitative consonant gradation and other forms of consonant variation within the word stem; revision on inflectional forms that students find difficult and morphosyntactic differences between Finnish and Inari Sámi.

Inari Sámi

Timing:

2nd –3rd year

Learning outcomes:

The section on phonology focuses on variation in the word stem: it provides a systematic presentation of half-long monophthongs, vowel lengthening in particular sound environments, systematic vowel variation in the 1st and 2nd syllable, length of diphthongs in different sound environments and consonant changes in later syllables. The system of consonant gradation, and especially the lengthening and shortening involved, is also introduced. The section on morphology deals with the inflection of different stem types (noun declension and verb conjugation). Having completed the course, students are able to use different types of noun declension and verb conjugation in Inari Sámi and are able actively to produce the different types of variation in words (consonant gradation as well as possible length variation and vowel variation). They are able to use the correct Inari Sámi verbs and inflectional forms in particular contexts and have both a practical and a theoretical understanding of Inari Sámi phonology and morphology.

The course prepares students for independently carrying out a translation project and for evaluating translations by others. The idea is to translate texts that deal with topics and vocabularies that the students are familiar with, so that the target text is of high quality and that the content is consistent with the source text.

Upon completion of the course, students have developed their skills as translators within translation studies and another, related field and are able to produce target texts that are of high linguistic quality. Students are also capable of finding solutions to difficult problems in translation. They are capable of translating independently and responsibly as well as of evaluating translations by others in a constructive manner.

Contents:

Process translation and evaluation of translations

Mode of delivery:

Learning outcomes:

The course acquaints students, first of all, with reasons why languages become extinct. Secondly, the course acquaints students with pre-emptive thinking: what can be done in order to guarantee the vitality of languages? Thirdly, the course offers students an overview of the means of revitalization.

Having completed the course, students are able to identify the key principles of language shift, language endangerment and the phenomenon of language revitalization. Students are also able to explain and use common means of revitalization.

Contents:

Language revitalization as a global phenomenon, key terminology in revitalization research, factors influencing revitalization, definition of endangerment, key means of language revitalization, significance of written language in revitalization, significance of language programmes in revitalization.

Mode of delivery:

Self study

Learning activities and teaching methods:

Book examination on the whole course OR book examination and fieldwork

Target group:

Priority is given to students of Sámi languages; open to students who have completed the required studies in Inari Sámi or North Sámi (see Prerequisites)

Prerequisites and co-requisites:

Before taking the course, students must have completed at least the Introductory and Basic courses in Inari Sámi or at least the Basic and Advanced courses in North Sámi. Students may also otherwise indicate to have adequate knowledge of one or several Sámi languages.

Recommended or required reading:

All students will take a book examination or write a literature summary worth of 3 sp, for example, on the following materials:

Lenore A. Grenoble & Lindsay J. Whaley 2006: Saving Languages. An Introduction to Language Revitalization. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press. (207 p.); Joshua A. Fishman 2001: Can threatened languages be saved? Pp. 1–22 (Why is it so hard to save a threatened language). Clevedon: Multilingual Matters; Joshua A. Fishman 1997: Reversing Language Shift. Pp. 80–114 (How Threatened is 'Threatened?'). Clevedon: Multilingual Matters; Leanne Hinton 2001: Language Revitalization: An Overview. – The Green Book of Language Revitalization in Practice. Linguistic Revitalization in Scandinavia and Finland*. - International Journal of Bilingual Education and Bilingualism, Vol 6:1, 66–70.

If, rather than carrying out fieldwork, students wish to take an examination or write a literature summary worth of further 2 sp, the rest of the literature will be agreed upon with the person responsible for the course. Suitable additional readings include, e.g. Joshua A. Fishman 1997: Reversing Language Shift pp. 1–79 and publications on the use of the language nest approach and continuing education in Inari Sámi.

Assessment methods and criteria:

a. book examination and/or summary of literature (5 sp)

OR

b. book examination/summary of literature (3 sp) and fieldwork (2 sp) in a selected workplace that is involved in language revitalization

For completing the course through fieldwork, students must work at an appropriate workplace for 36 hours.

Students will also write an approximately 3-page learning journal about their period of field work in the target language. In their learning journal, students will make observations about language revitalization at the workplace. Students must hand in a certificate of their period of fieldwork, signed by the employer.

Learning outcomes:

The course acquaints students with the Inari Sámi language in its cultural context and with Inari Sámi ways of living with the guidance of a language master. During the course, students may focus on the idiolect of one language master or follow the language use of several language masters.

Having completed the course, students are able to evaluate and analyze Inari Sámi life and culture within the language community, under the guidance of a language master (usually an older Inari Sámi speaker). They are also able to recognize the special features of idiolects and compare them with literary language.

Contents:

Students learn Inari Sámi language as it is used within the culture and gain an understanding of the Inari Sámi culture from their language masters through the master–apprentice language training approach. The master–apprentice pair uses the so-called learning by doing method.

Mode of delivery:

Contact teaching

Learning activities and teaching methods:

4-hour introductory lecture (preparation), agreeing on meetings with language masters, 20 hours of master–apprentice work in the field, writing a learning journal after each meeting with a language master and writing a 4–5-page final report on the master–apprentice language training period

Target group:

Major and minor students of Inari Sámi.

Prerequisites and co-requisites:

Basic Studies in Inari Sámi completed, at least 2/3 of Intermediate Studies completed.

Recommended or required reading:

As additional materials, publications on continuing education in Inari Sámi as well as Leanne Hinton with Matt Vera and Nancy Steele 2002: How to Keep Your Language Alive. Berkeley: Heyday Books.
